

BUILDING NO. 14
U.S. COAST GUARD YARD
CURTIS BAY
Public (Restricted)

Building No. 14, a classroom facility at the U.S. Coast Guard Yard at Curtis Bay, was converted from its original Officers' Headquarters uses to educational functions after World War II. Building No. 14 is a one-story, hipped-roof frame cottage, covered with asbestos siding and asbestos-shingled roof. Its essentially residential character reflects a prototypical design for suburban tract housing seen in large-scale developments in the United States after World War II. The majority of the interior space of the cottage is reserved for a large open educational/recreational space, with areas along the south and east walls utilized as bunk areas and kitchen.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Erected in 1935, Building No. 14, Lecture Hall, is a one story, hipped roof frame structure which has been in continuous use as an educational/recreational facility since conversion from its original function as an officers' quarters after World War II. The structure rests on a cement foundation and is clad on all sides with asbestos siding and has an asbestos tile roof. A metal chimney rises from the peak of the roof.

The building's front facade faces west and is five bays wide, with two 2/2 sash windows flanking each side of the centrally placed doorway. A modern metal awning shelters this doorway and three wooden steps which lead to the ground. The north and south facades are identical, each containing two 2/2 sash windows. The north facade features two 2/2 sash windows at the western end. The rear (east) facade contains four windows, the two on the north half 2/2 sash, the two on the south half boarded. The south facade contains a doorway with pipe-railed brick stairs to the ground on the east end, and two 2/2 sash windows on the west end.

The interior layout devotes a large square space immediately inside the front door to recreational/educational activities. Off a hallway along the northern end of the building are four bunkrooms. Restrooms, storage areas and kitchen occupy the eastern end of the building.
